You don't need to be flexible to start yoga. You start yoga because you want to become more flexible.

That's the sentence I wish more stiff, curious, slightly nervous adults heard before walking into a studio.

Most people I talk to aren't afraid of yoga. They're afraid of being the only beginner in a room full of people who look like they've done it for a decade.

So at Lotus Loft Yoga, we built something for exactly that moment.

The November Weekend Beginner Series is four 75-minute Saturday sessions, capped at 12 people, so every student gets real attention and real posture corrections.

The path is simple:

Week 1: breathing and posture
Week 2: standing poses
Week 3: gentle flows
Week 4: a sustainable home routine

No prior flexibility needed. Mats and props are all provided. You just show up.

That last week matters most to me. The goal isn't to make you dependent on a studio. It's to send you home with a short routine you can actually keep.

If you've been curious about a beginner yoga series at a local yoga studio, with small group yoga and yoga breathing basics at the start, this is a gentle way in.

Yoga is for your current body, not the flexible bodies you see on social media.

Early-bird price is $89 if you book by October 31. Register on our website or at the front desk.

Lotus Loft Yoga To: your subscribers

Too stiff for yoga? Start here.

PREVIEW Four Saturdays, 12 spots per group, and every mat and prop provided.

Hi there,

If you've ever thought, "I'm too stiff for yoga," this note is for you.

Here's the thing: yoga isn't a reward for being flexible. It's how you build flexibility and balance. Yoga is for your current body, exactly as it is today.

That's why we created the November Weekend Beginner Series at Lotus Loft Yoga. It's four 75-minute Saturday sessions, with a group cap of 12 so you're never lost in the crowd.

Here's how it unfolds:

Week 1: breathing and posture
Week 2: standing poses
Week 3: gentle flows

Week 4: a simple home routine you can keep

We provide all the mats and props. You bring yourself, comfortable clothes, and a little curiosity. No experience needed, no pressure to keep up.

By the end, you'll know how to practice safely in a studio and on your own living room floor.

The early-bird price is $89 for the full series, available until October 31.

See you on the mat,
Lotus Loft Yoga

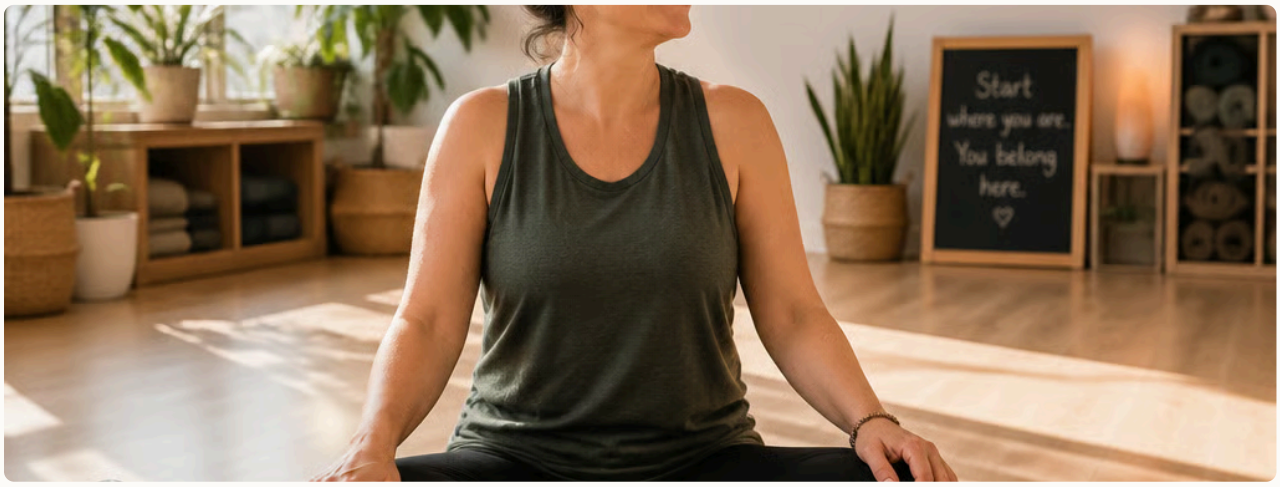

Save your spot before October 31 on our website or at the front desk and lock in $89.

Beginner Yoga Series: No Flexibility Needed

SPOKEN SCRIPT

You don't need to be flexible to start yoga. That's the whole point. You start yoga to become flexible. Lotus Loft Yoga built the November Weekend Beginner Series for exactly that feeling of being the stiffest person in the room. It's four Saturday sessions, 75 minutes each. Here's how it works. First, there's nothing to bring and nothing to prove. No prior flexibility is required, and we provide every mat and prop. So the two biggest excuses are gone. Second, the classes are capped at 12 people. That means you get real attention and real posture corrections, so you're never lost and never guessing. Third, it builds step by step. Week one is breathing and posture. Week two is standing poses. Week three is gentle flows. Week four puts it all together into a short home routine. So you're never rushed into anything too advanced. By the end, you can practice with confidence, in the studio or in your living room. Yoga isn't about the bodies you see online. It's for the body you have right now. The early-bird price is just $89 if you book by October 31. Register on our website or at the Lotus Loft Yoga front desk today.

KEYWORD Beginner Yoga Series

Lotus Loft Yoga is launching a Weekend Beginner Series this November to help adults overcome the intimidation of starting yoga. The program consists of four 75-minute Saturday sessions with a small group cap of 12 to ensure personalized attention. The curriculum is progressive: Week 1 covers breathing and posture, Week 2 focuses on standing poses, Week 3 introduces gentle flows, and Week 4 teaches a sustainable home routine. By providing all necessary mats and props and emphasizing that no prior flexibility is required, the studio aims to create a low-pressure entry point for locals. An early-bird price of $89 is available for those who book by October 31 via the website or front desk.

PROBLEM IT SOLVES

The physical and social intimidation of being 'new' in a fitness environment where everyone else seems advanced.

WHAT YOUR AUDIENCE WANTS

To gain the confidence and fundamental skills to practice yoga safely both in a studio and at home.

EMOTIONAL HOOK

The empowering relief of realizing that yoga is for your current body, not just the 'flexible' bodies you see on social media.

CONTRARIAN ANGLE

You don't need to be flexible to start yoga; you start yoga specifically because you want to build flexibility and balance.

KEY IDEAS

1. Radical Accessibility
   Removes the two biggest barriers—physical insecurity and lack of gear—that prevent people from starting.
2. Progressive Curriculum
   Provides a logical roadmap so students don't feel overwhelmed by advanced movements too quickly.
3. Intimate Learning Environment
   Ensures every student receives personal attention and posture corrections, reducing the risk of injury or feeling lost.
4. Empowerment for Home Practice
   Moves yoga from a 'studio-only' activity to a sustainable lifestyle habit that students can maintain independently.
5. Time-Limited Early Bird Incentive
   Encourages immediate commitment and provides financial value for those planning ahead for their November wellness.
